

Should Sikhs' be allowed to ride a motorcycle without a helmet?

by Allison Kirchner

I believe that Sikhs should not be allowed to ride a motorbike without a helmet. First, allowing Sikhs to ride a motorbike without a helmet would open the doors to allowing them to challenge their need to follow other laws established in Canada. Second, it is unsafe to ride a motorized vehicle without any kind of head protection. Finally, the law was made so everyone had the same rules and was treated equally so the law should not be bent for certain religions. Allowing Sikhs to disregard one law because of religious reasons would open the doors to all religions to challenge laws they feel violate their freedom. This would reduce the effectiveness of law enforcement.
